A SOCIALIST TEMPLE.

There Is Talk of Building One in This City.

Fred G. Strickland, of Chicago, who delivered a series of street speeches on socialism in this city prior to the recent municipal election, addressed a large crowd in Machinists' Hall last night on "Work and Wages." He talked of the evolution of society and conditions that have brought about the present economic system, and with us. Isn't it about time they were said that the rapid usurpation of man's | beginning?" work by machines can only be counteracted by a new adjustment on socialistic principles. In his discourse he advocated the building of a Socialist temple in Indianapolis similar to the one in Chicago, where they have a brass band, an orchestra, free library and women's clubs. A movement may be started to establish such an institution in this city. Mr. Strickland will return for another lecture here

A Transcript in State Bank's Case Filed in Supreme Court.

A transcript was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday in the appeal of the State Bank of Indiana from the judgment rendered in favor of V. M. Backus and others in the bank's suit against them by Judge Carter, of the Superior Court. The suit years ago," said Mr. Parry, "has not been was based on a number of judgments that had previously been recovered by the bank against Mr. Backus, and sought to apply to the payment of the judgments certain property conveyed by Backus to his wife. The amount involved is about $26,000 of principal, which with accrued interest amounts to something like $30,000. The property sought to be obtained by the bank is the homestead on North Meridian street.

MEETING OF THE PROMOTERS

ACTION AT ONCE.

Officers of the Road Talk of Its Advantages-Solving of the Fuel Problem.

The question whether this city is to be coal and limestone regions and timber areas of southern and southwestern Indiana is now "up to" the local city government, and depends altogether upon the granting or refusing of an entrance to the city to the Indianapolis Southern Railway. A meeting of promoters of the road was held yesterday morning in the office of W.

E. Stevenson and another in the afternoon in the office of Charles E. Barrett, and after the second meeting the announcewas made that early to-morrow morning deeds will be placed on record showing the Indianapolis Southern to be in full possession of ground enough to constitute a right of way from the city limits straight through to the Union Station. The meetings were attended by Messrs. Stevenson, Parry and Barrett, officers of the road, | | and several of the directors, including John

"We propose to go before the Board of Public Works the first of next week," said Mr. Parry, "and ask permission to enter the city with our road. If permission is given us we will have construction gangs at work within ten days building the lin-We hope and believe we can have cars in operation within the next year. OVER OWN RIGHT OF WAY. The officials of the road are still firm in their determination not to agree to come to the Union Station over another company's tracks. "That would simply mean to let two turns of a rope be taken about our necks, and when the other fellow twisted we would have to stop breathing," said one of the officials, significantly. The amount of money invested by the Indianapolis Southern in land within the city limits over which it proposes to lay its tracks to the depot could not be ascertained, but it is known to be a considerable sum. This is taken to be ample refutation of statements that have been going the rounds to the effect that the scheme was only "hot air" or a project to force some existing railroad company to buy off the promoters of the new road.

The men who are prepared to build the Indianapolis Southern have gone carefully over its proposed route and are thoroughly familiar with the immense natural resources that will be literally laid at the feet of Indianapolis when the road becomes an assured fact The line will leave Indianapolis at point near where the Belt Railroad crosses White river, in the southwestern portion of the city, but on the east side of the river, and run almost due south through the counties of Marion and Johnson to the southwestern corner of the latter county, whence it takes a turn into Morgan county, touching Morgantown; thence runs almost directly south to Nashville, ir Brown county, giving that county the first railroad in its entire history. From Nashville the road goes southwest to Bedford, taking in the great colitic limestone field admittedly the largest in the world. From Bedford the line runs in a southwesterly direction through the northwestern portion of Orange county, where it strikes the coal field of that part of the State. Thence it continues to the northeast corner of Dubois county, running southwesterly through that county and Spencer and Warrick counties, bringing up finally at Evansville. All of the last-named counties are in the coal territory. The road takes in the city of Rockport and branches will be built later to take in a still greater part of the territory in southern Indiana that is prac-ically virgin to railroads. The promoters of the new road wonder constantly that such a line was not built long ago. One of them took down a wall map of Indiana yesterday and drew a pencil mark from Indianapolis clear down to Jeffersonville, in the southwestern part of the State, and another mark from the capital city clear through to Vincennes, n the southwest, showing a vast territory comprising more than twenty countles that is absolutely without direct communication with Indianapolis. "The people in that immense territory," he said, "do not trade

SOLUTION OF FUEL PROBLEM. The point that the officials of the road dianapolis Southern, built and in operation, means the satisfactory solution of the fuel problem for Indianapolis, not merely for a few years, but practically forever. They point to the proved fact that the road runs for more than eighty miles through one of the richest coal fields in the United States. This coal is declared to be as well idapted for domestic uses as any that can be obtained anywhere. It is equal to the West Virginia coal, the railroad officials declare, and the people of Indianapolis pay $4 per ton for the Eastern fuel, while the coal from soutern Indiana can, it is mainained, be brought to this city by the Indianapolis Southern and sold here for onehalf that price or even less. 'Why, the benefit secured to Indianapolis by the discovery of natural gas fourteen a circumstance to the advantage that will accure from the building of the Indianapolis Southern and securing thereby cheap Hugg, Frank Bosler, Josh Zimmerfuel indefinitely. Natural gas is disappearing. Everybody knows that. So it is certainly an opportune time to make arrangements to meet the situation.' The officials of the new road talk less about the building-stone territory that it will reach than about the coal fields. They know that the public understands thoroughly the value of Indiana colitic imestone. It may not, however, be genpolis Southern passes over thirty-two oiles of this stone-quarry region of In-Borings have been made by pronoters of the road in many places to deternine the thickness of this building stone.

The line, as originally contemplated, vill be 160 miles in length. One of the men rincipally interested in the project talked renerally yesterday of the territory to be raversed by the road. "A great many people," he said, "imagine that the terriory traversed by the Indianapolis Southrn is nothing but hills and hollows, that he soil is not good for much and that the region is thinly inhabited. As a matter of fact, the soil, almost as an entirety, is excelient for agricultural purposes, and that part of it which is not is admirably adapted to the raising of fruit. Take Brown county, for instance. There is one of the finest fruit-raising districts in the country. As to population, that territory is the most thickly populated part of Indiana outside of the gas belt. Then the immense amout of timber that will be reached by the road is worthy of consideration. It can readily be seen that the completion of the road is a matter that touches

QUAILS' LAST QUIET DAY.

Season Is Open and the Shooting Will Begin To-Morrow.

Quail hunting will begin in earnest tomorrow. The game law provides that the open season shall begin on the 10th of November, but another law provides penalties for shooting game on Sunday, so the birds will have one day more of rest. Reports from farmers and hunters indicate quail in plenty, due in a measure to the work of the game wardens in vigorously prosecuting violators of the law.

Quails Plentiful in Wayne.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. HAGERSTOWN, Ind., Nov. 9.-Farmers in this part of the county have systematically refused to sign permits for hunters to shoot on their land and sportsmen find themselves at the arrival of the hunting season practically barred from all the land. There has been a belief for many years here that hunters exceeded their privileges, but landowners in general preferred to offer no objection. The law enacted by the last Legislature, however, accords to landowners more rights than they have ever had, and they are disposed to avail themselves of the advantages. Quails fairly swarm in this and adjoining counties and rabbits are plentiful. The dry season last summer was favorable to the hatching and rearing of birds, and many pairs are known to have nested three times, each pair thus producing from fifty to sixty birds. The last coveys are now but little past half grown, and their slow

Mrs. Durbin made the foregoing remark after reading a published day that F. E. Holloway will this morning in the church named make formal public request of the women of the congregation that they remove their hats and bonnets and keep them off during the service. " have always made it a point," continued Mrs. Durbin, "to wear a particularly sm and unobtrusive bonnet to church. I have a bonnet made especially for that purpose I would not, of course, wear a large hat to church, but I do not consider it proper that women should sit through a service without anything on their heads."
